

Invitation to participate in an interview exploring genetic counsellors' experiences of perceived urgency in clinical practice

You are invited to join our student research study exploring genetic counsellors' experiences of perceived urgency in clinical practice. The purpose and aim of this research is to understand genetic counsellors' experience of perceived urgency in their clinical practice, to inform genetic counsellor training, practice and supervision needs.

We invite you to take part in an interview to explore your experiences of perceived urgency and how it may have impacted your practice. The video or phone interview is anticipated to take approximately 30-60 minutes to complete.

If you are interested in participating or would like further information, please email Bertie Purkiss on bpurkiss@student.unimelb.edu.au

HREC No: 34272

Thank you in advance.

This student project is supervised by Ms Kirsty West and A/Prof Laura Forrest